

Performances Of The Newly Upgraded Large COMPASS Polarized Target

F. Gautheron¹, G. Baum¹, Y. Kisselev¹, N. Doshita², J. Koivuniemi², K. Kondo², W. Meyer², G. Reicherz², J. Ball³, A. Magnon³, C. Marchand³

¹*Physics Department, University of Bielefeld,
33501 Bielefeld, Germany*

²*Physics department, University of Bochum,
44780 Bochum, Germany*

³*CEA, DAPNIA/SPhn Saclay,
91191 Gif-sur-Yvette, France*

The COMPASS target system took opportunity of the CERN SPS shutdown in 2005 to receive a major hardware upgrade for the new period of data taking starting in 2006. A new superconductive magnet with a larger acceptance combined with a new microwave cavity and a three cell target already showed excellent performances that we propose to present for the first time.